Listening to the Cries of the Earth and the Poor

The UK has a particular responsibility to show leadership on climate change, given the significance of our contribution to it, which originated with the Industrial Revolution. Yet it is not doing this.

For example, the environmental not-for-profit organisation Friends of the Earth successfully challenged the Government's climate-wrecking decision to expand Heathrow Airport in the Court of Appeal in February 2020. The Court ruled that the decision was unlawful on climate grounds, including failure to consider the Paris Climate Agreement. The organisation has gone on to defend this victory for environmental justice against a commercial developer in the Supreme Court this month.

In addition, CAFOD has repeatedly highlighted the grave contradiction in our Government's approach to the climate emergency, in claiming, on the one hand, to be a global leader on climate change and environmental protection, whilst on the other, continuing to fund fossil fuel projects in developing countries using aid money.

Disappointingly, our Government has recently decided to fund a multibillion-dollar gas project in Mozambique, the 7th poorest country in the world, off the beautiful, pristine coast of the Cabo Delgado region. Decisions like this by Western Governments amount to an outsourcing of their dirty fossil fuel developments to poor countries, and are in my view, morally bankrupt. Coastal communities in the Cabo Delgado region rely on fishing for income and food. Yet another recent gas project in this area has resulted in the "removal" of hundreds of families to villages far from their farming lands and fishing grounds and homes.

Friends of the Earth believes that the Government's recent decision is unlawful, and has launched legal proceedings to challenge it in the High Court on the basis of failure to consider the project's environmental impacts.

As Christians, I believe our faith compels us very clearly to fight for and work with the vulnerable and marginalised. This includes the poor, and it also includes the natural world, upon which all life depends, including our species.

Our faith also challenges us to take hope and inspiration, that God can guide us along the right path, if only we will listen and open up our hearts. God can give us the strength to succeed so that we will, in line with the prophetic words of the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr when he addressed the American nation, "rise up and live out the true meaning of its [our] creed".

The challenge ahead of us is a great one, but we can feel inspired, not despondent or overwhelmed. Pope Francis's Laudato Si calls on us all, to take courage in this struggle for our world:

"Let us sing as we go. May our struggles and our concern for this planet never take away the joy of our hope" because ultimately, "At the end, we will find ourselves face to face with the infinite beauty of God (cf. 1 Cor 13:12)."

Living God,

we give you thanks and praise,
for you have made us and given us life, you have redeemed us and set us free.

Loving God,

we give you thanks and praise,
for you have found us and made us your own,
named us and called us 'Beloved.'

Accompanying God,

we give you thanks and praise,
for you have promised to be with us always and
nothing can separate us from your love.
God, our great God,
we love you and adore you.

CHILDREN'S LITURGY

We'll be thinking about How many commandments
are there?
Why do we have commandments?
How can I follow these two commandments?

We'll be talking about
What is a commandment?
What are the 10 commandments?
When Jesus talks about love your neighbour, who does he mean?

We'll be praying for...
That we can follow the commandments and live
good lives
That we can love God
and our neighbour

Our Gospel is about...
In the gospel this week Jesus is questioned again by the Pharisees. This time they ask him, "Which is the greatest commandment in the law?"
Jesus replies, "You shall love the Lord, your God. This is the greatest and the first commandment.
The second is like it:
"You shall love your neighbour as yourself."
